ABSTRACT

This bibliography is an attempt at compiling and organizing a comprehensive list of Alaska environmental impact statements. Arrangement is by the main issuing or responsible agency and is then divided into sub-agencies. Several publications which are not official environmental impact statements, but of a similar nature, are also included. The bibliography was prepared in response to the current interest in Alaska lands. An introduction is provided. (RE)

INTRODUCTION

With the current interest in Alaskan lands, there exists a definite exigency for a compendium of environmental impact statements for the State. This bibliography which I have arranged, is an attempt at compiling and organizing a comprehensive list of these elusive publications. However, this enumeration does in no way qualify as a complete and exhaustive list. It should be noted that it is not an account for precise bibliographic citations, since many titles are arranged in a subject key word orientation.

Environmental impact statements are required by law of all federal agencies under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969. These statements are a means of evaluating the possible environmental impact that may occur through some alteration of the environment, such as construction, the use of natural resources, or the establishment of national preserves. When the initial plans for a project are compiled, a draft environmental impact statement is submitted for review by the government and the public. A final environmental impact statement is then later prepared including the comments and objections that were raised concerning the potential impact on the environment. All environmental impact statements are required to be made available to the public.

Bibliographic control for environmental impact statements has not been well coordinated. They appear in the "Federal Register" and in the "102 Monitor," a monthly publication issued by the Council on Environmental Quality. As of 1977, the Information Resource Press has been indexing environmental impact statements in their monthly periodical, "EIS, Key to Environmental Impact Statements." Recently, important environmental impact statements have been appearing in the "Monthly Catalog of United States Government Publications" and are for sale by the Government Printing Office.

This bibliography then, is an attempt at organizing a comprehensive list of the environmental impact statements dealing with the State of Alaska. Arrangement is by the main issuing or responsible agency involved and then divided into sub-agencies. Several publications which are not official environmental impact statements, but consist of a similar nature, are also included. Most, but not all of these documents are located in the University of Alaska's, Elmer E. Rasmuson Library collection.

The initial concept of enumerating Alaskan environmental impact statements was conceived by Dr. Marvin Falk, Arctic Bibliographer, to whom I was employed as an assistant. The undertaking of this bibliography would not have been realized without his intermediacy and assistance.
